

LAND DISPUTE FLARES ANEW

Five Prisoners In Clean Escape From Miller County Jail

White Youth and Four Negroes Flee Through Sawn Windows

OFFICERS IN SEARCH

Youth Held in Probe of Car Theft Ring Leads Delivery

TEXARKANA—Taking advantage of an early cover of darkness and the loud songs of other prisoners, Raymond Bounds, 19-year-old youth, and four negroes sawed their way out of the Miller county jail shortly after 6 p. m. Thursday.

Jailer Will Harris was informed of the break by Dorsey Head, another prisoner, as he conducted a group of visitors into the jail about 7 p. m. He immediately notified Sheriff R. W. Turquette, who with Deputy Sheriff Tom Fisher, began a search for the escaped prisoners. Bowie county officers also were instructed to be on the look-out for the quintet.

The delivery, according to other prisoners in the jail, was effected by Bounds who sawed an opening in a barred window on the north side of the jail on the second floor. The four negroes going with him were Son Lollis, Anna Caldwell, Beadley Moore and Allen Reed, all of whom were being held on various charges of theft and grand larceny.

Leap From Roof

After sawing a hole in the window barely large enough for them to pass through, the five then leaped upon the roof of an adjoining garage and made their escape down the alley. All are well known to officers of both sides of the city and their arrests were expected soon.

Leaves Harris said the break was evidently preplanned a few minutes after 6 p. m., just after he had left the jail to deliver a letter to a federal prisoner being held in the Texarkana, Ark., city jail. As he walked up the alley toward the Arkansas municipal building, Harris said his attention was attracted to the jail by the loud barking of his dog. The fact that the dog often became excited and barked seemingly for no reason caused the jailer to disregard the warning. He said he was satisfied the men were ready to crawl out of the window when the dog barked.

The five prisoners made their escape through the same window that yielded to the efforts of another group of prisoners several months ago. The window had been repaired and the bars welded securely, but evidently gave readily to the efforts of Bounds. Other prisoners said a very short time was required to saw through the bars.

Held in Theft Ring Probe

Although no charges had been filed against Bounds, the youth was being held in connection with a car theft ring which was reported to have been operating between Texarkana and Shreveport for several months. W. O. Fenton, alleged ring leader of the gang, was held to the Miller county grand jury Tuesday by Municipal Judge Louis Josephs.

Bounds was arrested several days ago when officers came upon him asleep in the rear of Fenton's home, about two miles south of the city. Buster Lee, Luther Howard and Lee Brandon, alleged members of the gang, waived preliminary hearing and are now awaiting action of the grand jury.

Bank's Creditors May Lose $500,000

Check-Up of Hudspeth Institutions Completed by Committee

HARRISON—Losses to depositors and other creditors of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Harrison, parent bank in the chain of nine banks controlled by A. T. Hudspeth, now a fugitive, possibly will exceed $500,000, it was said Thursday following completion of an appraisal of assets of the banks.

The appraisal was made by a committee composed of J. O. Wilson, representing J. M. Wagley, liquidating agent; L. M. Martin, representing the depositors' association; and J. A. Center of Alpena, selected by the other two appraisers as the third man on the committee.

H. A. Daugherty, state bank examiner, worked with the committee. Neither Mr. Daugherty nor Mr. Wagley would make a statement as to the probable percentage depositors may expect as a result of liquidation, but it was said unofficially that, based on experience of other insolvent banks not more than 40 per cent can be realized. At the time the bank closed its assets were listed as worth more than $1,000,000.

Bravery In Halting Mob Is Rewarded

Sheriff's Wife to Receive Medal For Her Heroic Action

HUNTINGTON, Tenn.—(AP)—A frail woman who faced an angry mob last April and with a few quiet but firmly spoken words caused it to disperse is to be honored here October 27.

She will receive the interracial commission's medal in a public ceremony.

The woman is Mrs. J. C. Butler, wife of the sheriff of Carroll county. She weighs 110 pounds and is the mother of five.

Henry Wauford, a negro who had confessed a murder, was placed in the Carroll jail. That night a mob appeared and Mrs. Butler went to the door.

The mob surged forward as if starting to force its way into the jail. "You may do it," Mrs. Butler told the crowd, "but if you do, it will be over my dead body." The mob disbanded.

"The Commission on Interracial Cooperation awarded her the medal 'for notable service'."

The club is to be the guest of the Rev. Geo. F. X. Strassner, secretary, concluding a series of meetings with the individual members. Several visitors are expected. A special program is being arranged.

President R. V. Herndon was host to the club at his home Thursday night, at one of the best meetings of the year. Mrs. Herndon had prepared an excellent meal, and was given a vote of appreciation by the members for her efforts in making the meeting successful. The dining room was decorated in the Halloween motif. Dr. A. J. Neighbors won her thanks for recovering a diamond setting, which had dropped out of a diamond ring, just before the meeting started.

Northwest's Great Wilson Turns to Grappling Game

SEATTLE—(AP)—Another of football's greats—George Wilson, All-American halfback at the University of Washington a few years ago—has joined the ranks of the big grab and grapple men.

George, using the stiff arm punch that carried him to many touchdowns and the flying tackle, originated by Gus Sonnenberg, former claimant of the heavyweight championship and Dartmouth linesman, has been successful in his first bouts in the Pacific northwest.

Wilson received his first grappling instructions from Sonnenberg when he was playing professional football in the east. He weighs 195 pounds and stands 5 feet 9 inches.

Inside of two months Wilson hopes to enter big-city wrestling on the coast.

Changes Ruling on Cigarette Stamps

Mr. Gates Decides Official Stickers May Be Affixed to Cellophane

LITTLE ROCK—New regulations on stamping and cancelling stamps on cigars and cigarettes were issued by David A. Gates, commissioner of revenues. The regulations supersede a previous order and permit use of stamps on cellophane wrappers.

October 1 the commissioner announced that cellophane wrapper must be removed from cigarettes and stamps affixed to the wrapper. This was followed by a protest from the manufacturers, who contend that the cellophane wrappers protect their products in keeping them fresh. The rule was suspended temporarily.

The new regulations provide that cellophane wrappers may be roughened with sandpaper or other similar material, so the stamp may be securely affixed, or that glue or other solvent may be used. The commissioner said he has found that stamps may be securely affixed to packages in this manner without removing the cellophane wrappers, but dealers if they prefer may remove the cellophane and attach stamps.

"The manufacturers appreciate the care and consideration shown by Mr. Gates in this matter," Grover T. Owens, who represents many of the larger cigarette manufacturers, said. "It is a fair regulation and the manufacturers are well pleased and will pledge 100 per cent co-operation in enforcing the new order."

Mr. Owens said that the manufacturers estimate that cigarettes without the cellophane wrappers lose one per cent of their strength in four days, compared with 42 days for this same deterioration where the cellophane is used.

Alford Defends Henderson State Against 'Lobbyists'

Prosecuting Attorney Tells Hope Rotary Story of Arkadelphia College

LOW-COST SCHOOL

Poor Child Deserves Most From State, Speaker Declares

A stirring plea in defense of Henderson State Teachers college at Arkadelphia against what he said was an organized attempt to abolish some of the south-state schools, was made before the Hope Rotary club Friday noon in Hotel Barlow by Prosecuting Attorney Millard Alford.

Mr. Alford, whose home is in Gurdon, Clark county, frankly professed his sympathies for the struggle to keep alive a 50-year-old institution which has become an integral part of Arkansas history.

He charged that the state was building up a few high-priced colleges and universities to which the children of the poor would be denied entrance. "I tell you," he said, "that whenever any institution of learning gets its standards so high that it slams its door in the face of the poor youngster from the country who has a dream of a good education and a useful career, right then I tell you I am against such an institution."

Low Cost to State

Henderson State Teachers college, he went on to say, will cost the taxpayers this year $49,500. It has an enrollment of 322 students at the fall term, and with the year's summer enrollment, a total roll of 750. This means an average cost of between $60 and $70 per student, he said—"an annual cost which you cannot match anywhere in the state for a four-year educational institution."

He compared it specifically with the prevailing costs at the University of Arkansas and other state normal schools, State Teachers college at Conway.

"Henderson - Brown College, the speaker said, 'was a Methodist school which Arkadelphia cherished and fostered for the last 50 years. When the Methodists could no longer support it, the college property, worth $500,000, and worth not less than $350,000 on the present depreciated realty market, was deeded to the citizens of Arkadelphia, and by them deeded to the state. The State of Arkansas got this four-year normal school for the mere obligation of maintaining it. Last year this cost was $60,000—this year it is $49,500."

"It is supported not by a land tax, but out of the general revenue fund of the state, derived from excise and similar taxes."

South of the River

Mr. Alford attacked educational lobbyists who, he said, are forever forcing institutions north of the Arkansas river and fighting those south of the river. He listed 17 colleges as being north of the river, 7 of which are supported by the state—as against 3 state supported schools south of the river. "Yet the part of Arkansas lying south of the river contributes 71 per cent of the state's tax revenues," he declared.

"Henderson has been a big success as a normal school," Mr. Alford said. "It's active fall student list this year is 322, a gain of 60 over last fall, and its total this year including summer students will be 750, against 631 last year."

"There are 14 enrolled from Hempstead county this year."

"Over in Prescott a young woman who is attending Henderson college maintains a bus in which she drives a whole group of students back and forth to school every day at a cost of $5 a month, and makes money at it. The time is coming when a great railroad company will gather in students by railroad-buses every day to Henderson State Teachers college, at an expense of not over $10 a month."

Mr. Alford was introduced by a program sponsored by Bob Huguinin, of the program committee. President C. C. Spragins presided. The club had a 100 per cent attendance.

Jealousy Motive Seen In Murders

Mrs. Judd Angry With Two Victims, Phoenix Nurse Says

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Meager evidence pointing toward an accomplice in the slayings of Miss Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes Le Roi was sifted by Arizona authorities Thursday while Los Angeles police searched the cave-like recesses in the hills of Beverly Glen for traces of Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, suspected killer.

A policeman found a blanket and a small quantity of food in one of the holes adjacent to a cabin where Burton J. McKinnell, Mrs. Judd's brother, resided while he attended a university here. An officer had been detailed to watch the region in belief Mrs. Judd may have taken refuge in the semi desolate region.

While the hunt was confined to Southern California for Mrs. Judd, suspected of having slain her two companions in Phoenix and sent their bodies here in two trunks, Phoenix authorities sought two men and a woman who attended a party at Mrs. Judd's home the night before the women were slain.

An affectionate scene involving Mrs. Le Roi, Miss Samuelson and a man in the party was related to Phoenix authorities by a woman who had attended the party. Her name was not revealed. It was established J. J. Halloran, wealthy Phoenix lumberman, had attended the party but police made it clear Halloran was not a suspect. He was questioned concerning the attitude of Mrs. Judd toward the two women.

The theory of jealousy continued paramount throughout investigations. Authorities said they were undecided whether the jealousy arose through friendships with men or through an unnatural intimacy between the three women.

Although police in cities in every quarter of the United States have received reports of Mrs. Judd being sighted, authorities here said they believed she was in hiding in Southern California. She was known to have but $5 and was known to have been stopped by a car on a downtown street and allowed his sister to alight.

Oil Field Worker Accused as Bomber

Alleged to Have Caused Serious Injury to Smackover Widow

EL DORADO—Al Erickson, Smackover oil field worker, is in jail charged with assault with intent to kill in connection with a mysterious bombing in which sent one woman to the hospital in a serious condition and slightly injured another at Smackover Wednesday night.

Union county officers said that the man is a former sweetheart of Mrs. Edna Cunningham, aged 22, victim of the home made bomb. Erickson is alleged to have constructed a detonating apparatus and placed it with a charge of blasting powder in a candy box and placed it in the door of Mrs. Cunningham's room in a Smackover hotel. When the woman entered her room he found the package and called a friend, Miss Raisy Webb, who lives in the same building. Mrs. Cunningham picked the lid from the box. A terrific explosion resulted, hurling her across the room and burning her face and arms horribly. Miss Webb was knocked down.

Mrs. Cunningham was brought to the Warner Brown hospital here and was said to be recovering Thursday night. It has not been determined whether she will lose her sight.

Officers said that "strong circumstantial evidence" has been obtained, justifying Erickson's arrest. Erickson denied the charge, but admitted that he had "gone with Edna" until he left several weeks ago for the East Texas oil fields. On his return, officers said, he found another man visiting Mrs. Cunningham and vented his jealousy and anger in the home made bomb.

Arkansas Claim to Property Answered With Tex. Rangers

The Lone Star State Will Force Test Before Land Given Up

NOT WORTH LAWSUIT

Atty-Gen. Norwood Is of Opinion Land Is Not Worth Lawsuit

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Attorney General Hal Norwood took the view Thursday that if Texas is not already large enough, it can have a small hunting and fishing area on Red River, near Texarkana, on which rangers and game wardens are camping to uphold sovereignty.

It is not worth a lawsuit Norwood said.

Rangers In Charge

TEXARKANA—Using "two Texa" rangers to emphasize the move, Thursday night was in possession of a 400-acre tract of land 28 miles west of here in answer to a claim by Arkansas that it belonged to her.

The rangers were assisted by five state game wardens in establishing a patrol over the territory, which comprises Applewhite Hunting Club, the center of a controversy between Arkansas and Texas for many years.

How long Texas will keep possession of the area was uncertain. The only explanation came from one of the rangers, who said: "We may be here two days and we may be here six months but we'll be here until the thing is settled."

The two rangers are M. Burton and L. V. Hightower, of Ranger company B. They were sent here from Gladewater with the instruction to report to District Attorney Elmer L. Lincoln. The district attorney was out of the city when they arrived and they will not receive formal orders until Friday.

Accord to Be Sought

The game wardens were headed by Warden Hugh Ashford, of Bowie county. They were sent here by the game commission from various surrounding towns.

Representative R. M. Hubbard, acting as Governor Ross Sterling's personal representative, will go to Little Rock Saturday to discuss with Governor Harvey Parnell the possibility of an amicable settlement.

With Hubbard several members of the hunting club and their attorney, David Arnold, will make the trip to Little Rock in an effort to end the controversy. It is hoped that an agreement will be reached whereby Arkansas will withdraw its claim until after sovereignty of the territory is established by the United States supreme court.

Until such a negotiation is reached, however, the rangers will remain in possession of the area to enforce Texas game laws and to prevent Arkansas game wardens from invading the area. The Arkansas wardens will be forbidden from trespassing on the land until a settlement is made.

Although the entire area is a virtual hunter's paradise, it is practically worthless for other purposes. The lake is the chief attraction because of the superior duck hunting afforded.

Norwood Reverses Opinion

The sentiment of Ranger Burton was expressed Thursday afternoon with the declaration that if the governor he would "tell the governor of Arkansas to take the whole thing and forget it."

The same statement was made here last year by Attorney General Hal Norwood of Arkansas, who expressed the belief then that the territory lies in Texas. Norwood reversed his original opinion of last December.

It was Norwood's claim that investigated Governor Sterling to order the rangers here.

The meanderings of the Red river caused the entire dispute. A sudden change in the channel of the river, which cut sharply into Arkansas, occurred during an overflow in 1915, leaving the disputed tract between a bay in the river and the old bed.

Norwood based his claim on the land on the contention that the sudden change would not move the state boundary with the river but that it would remain at the old channel. He said the boundary would have remained with the river had the change been slow and gradual.

Basic Chinese Demands Unacceptable to Japan

TOKYO—(AP)—Official circles here Thursday termed as unacceptable the basic demands reputedly submitted by China to the League of Nations council as a means of formulating a settlement of the Sino-Japanese controversy in Manchuria.

Press dispatches said Dr. Alfred Zze, Chinese representative at Geneva, had presented the demands as an aide memoire to Aristide Brican, acting president of the league council. Nothing had been heard about them here from Kingichi Yoshizawa, Japan's league representative.

Bear Runs Amuck, Attacks Showmen

Circus Animal Killed After Seriously Injuring Carnival Attache

MONTICELLO—Two men attached to the Hoosier State Shows, a carnival company now showing in Monticello, were bitten badly and scratched by a bear Thursday. The bear, which was about five years old, was trained and supposed to be tame. It suddenly ran amuck, broke its tether and attacked Charles Carrington, aged 47, when he attempted to corral it.

Carrington sustained severe lacerations on the legs and hips. The owner of the animal, H. Friedly, 60, went to the rescue of Carrington and killed the bear with a sledgehammer after receiving several lacerations. The carcass was purchased by R. D. Wells, local business man, and dressed and placed in cold storage.

Beyond the Sunset

THE last obituaries have all been written, now, and the last funeral orations and telegraphed tributes have been read and digested. But the race that Thomas Edison served will remember for a long, long time—for as long, perhaps, as it remembers Edison himself—that final, surprising little remark that came from his deathbed: "It is very beautiful over there."

Will there ever be a biography of the man that does not contain that question? Probably not; for it represents one of those strange hints that are tossed out to us now and then—those strange hints that a dying man can, on occasion, peer through the veil, see what lies beyond, and, seeing, be dazzled by the fulfillment of a half-trusted dream.

Now the interpretations of it, of course, will vary. There will be plenty of people to assure us that the dying man was simply suffering from a delirium. In time probably some biographer will write that the remark was never actually made. There is no surer way of arousing contradiction than to imply that visible reality is only a shadow to cloak something infinitely more profound that lies beyond it.

But there will be others who will not look at it that way. The world, after all, is not so idyllic a place that mankind in general is content to see in death only the stopping of a worn-out machine. We have not yet outgrown the desire to pass beyond the sunset. Edison, at the point of death, looked into the sky and saw something beautiful; must we assume that fever was playing tricks with his brain—that brain which was never tricked before?

We can take it as we wish. Those to whom disbelief is precious will look at it in one way, and those who feel otherwise will look at it in another. Only one thing is certain. It will be remembered for centuries.

For that, when you come down to it, is the way the human heart is made. It questions, doubts and rejects—and then, at the last, clutches at a chance to believe. Edison, the solver of mysteries, the worker of miracles, dropped at his death a remark to focus the attention of his fellows on the greatest and oldest mystery of all.

And he himself, now, has solved it.

What About Timber Crop?

THE Arkansas legislature has voted to reduce the amount of acreage that will be planted in cotton during the next two years.

Passage by the legislature of the cotton bill was in line with a general movement over the South to reduce the 1931 crop. The relief move is expected to cause farmers in this and other states to turn to other lines more and more. Next year probably will see an increase in the amount of truck crops and food and feed crops.

It is only natural that farmers will have to take up some other "pay crop." Cotton has been the South's one big money producer and something will have to take its place. In this connection there is one crop that we fear is being largely overlooked, or at least is receiving far too little attention. We refer to the timber crop.

Arkansas, when you come to think about it, is largely a state of forests. More than 75 per cent of the land in the state is in forests. It can be readily seen that timber growing could easily become one of the biggest undertakings in Arkansas.

Timber represents one of the largest natural resources of which Arkansas can boast. It remains for us to capitalize upon our forests. Now would be a good time for us to take a forward step in the matter of realizing fully from our valuable timber lands.

Some money is being realized, that is true, but not to the extent that it should. Much of the land that is being cut over is being stripped to the point where another crop will not be available for years.

Properly handled Arkansas forests would produce a good crop every few years. Under the methods employed now many of the timber lands will not prove worth while again for nearly 20 years.

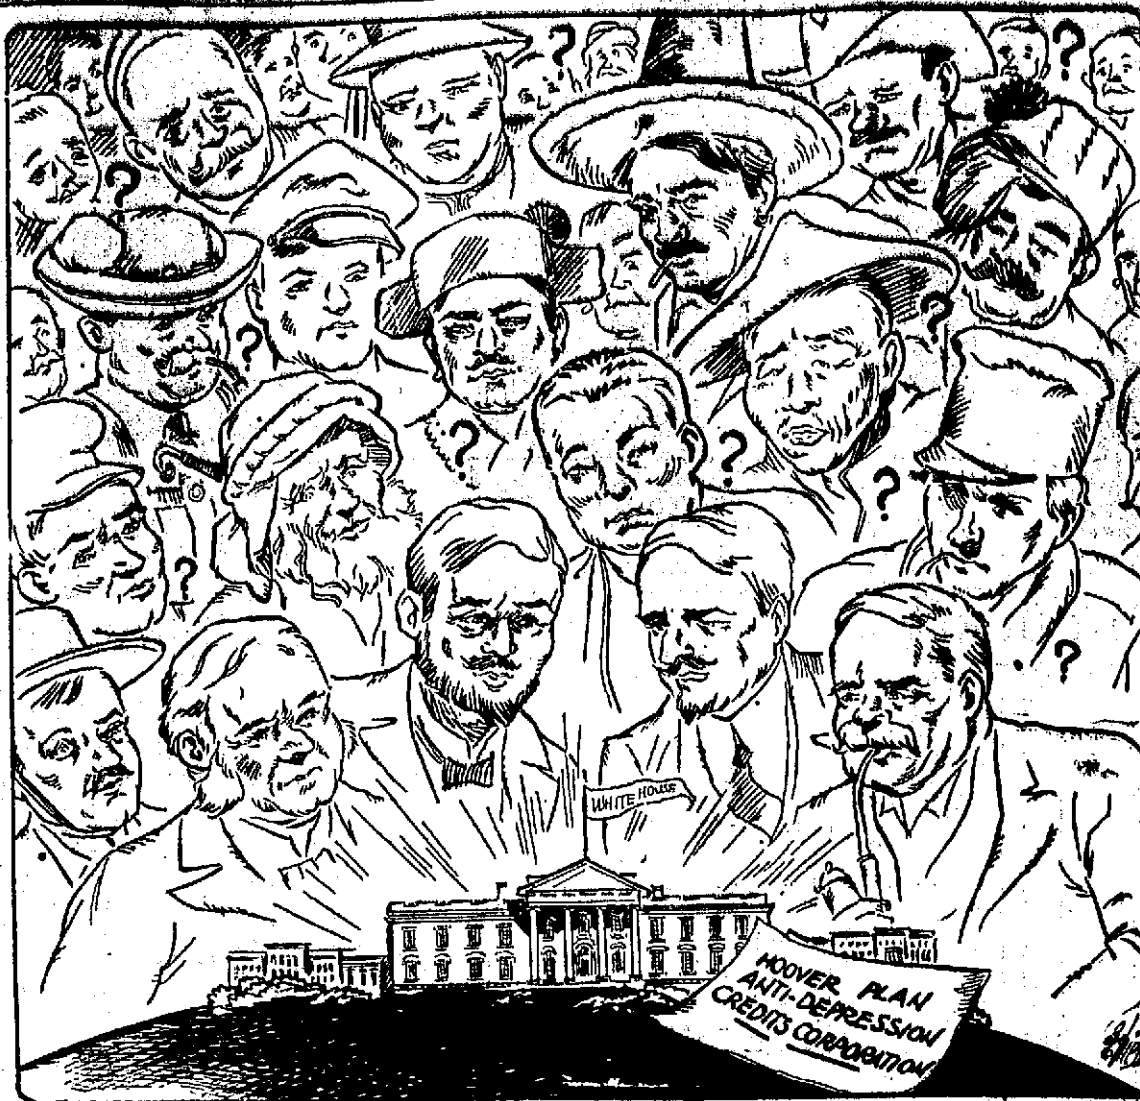

We need to practice proper forestry. Farmers and others of Arkansas need to be informed of the possibilities offered by their timber lands. The big majority know little or nothing about how to properly take care of their dwindling forests.

We believe the forestry commission can be of a big service to the state. Under the leadership of this body Arkansas can realize much from her forests during the coming years. We have delayed too long already this important work and it should behoove us to act before it is too late to take advantage of the opportunities offered.

Paper firms, mills and other companies should be willing to cooperate with the commission. They are interested in a continued supply and should be willing to supervise or see to it that the cutting of timber goes forward properly.

Arkansas needs to think more and more about forestry. Creation of the state commission was a big step forward and it now remains for us to push forward with a program that can mean big things to the state. —El Dorado News.

Eyes of the World!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 N.E.A. Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—There will always be speculation now as to what kind of a senator Dwight Morrow would have made had he lived.

His brilliant record elsewhere caused him to be considered one of the two or three outstanding statesmen in Congress. His success as a financier, diplomat, international negotiator, as a friend and adviser of two presidents and in most else that he undertook ranked him high among the public men of this country.

Although he served through an entire session, his death leaves the capital wondering whether he would or would not have achieved a splendid senatorial career such as might have led him to the presidency in 1936. For in the few months during which he sat in the Senate he effaced himself as far as possible from the public eye. He sat, listening questions. But he made no single bill and made not even a one-sentence speech. And those who had expected him to raise a new liberal voice on Capitol Hill saw him vote each and every time to support the administration in any matter of controversy.

PERHAPS, if he had lived, he would have distinguished himself as a fighting champion for an administration which needs one sorely in the next session. Those who think so saw him emerging as one of the great conservative Republican senators such as dot the past, a breed presently extinct. They saw him man to man with now as the logical man to succeed either Hoover or a Democratic president, believing that the time would then certainly be ripe for the election of a leader as wise as Morrow declared himself last year in New Jersey.

Of course there were others who thought Morrow—who solved the Mexican unpleasantness, saved the London naval conference from collapse and helped importantly to guide Hoover in recent critical international situations—was definitely out of his element in the Senate, fitted best for behind the scenes maneuvers and never likely to rise much above the level of the ordinary standpat senator. The mystery is now insoluble.

GOVERNOR THEODORE ROOSEVELT of Porto Rico, here lately confirmed some of the weird stories which deal with his early attempts to master the Spanish language on the island to the point where he could make a speech in it. For instance, the time he was on the platform trying to tell a few thousand Porto Ricans that he had four children and only succeeded in assuring them that he had "given birth to four children."

Whereupon, according to the governor, President Sanchez Morales of the Porto Rican Senate broke in and shouted:

"All things are possible in the tropics!"

Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur, who is the most lugubrious-looking member of the cabinet, is always making wise cracks about something or other.

He is just back from the west, after traveling extensively over the government's public lands and looking over various federal projects. He was so impressed by the number of jack rabbits on the domain under his jurisdiction that he returned with the boast:

"I am the king of the jack rabbits!"

William Allen White's reported assertion that he joined the Hoover-Gifford unemployment committee so as to be in better position to criticize it recalls the prominent member who strolled out from one of the widely hallehooed and supposedly important committee meetings and was asked by the correspondents what was going on inside.

"Don't quote me," he said, "but it's just a lot of sublimated blab!"

Your head lifted straight to the sky
Your roots holding fast where they lie
In the rich below;
Your branches outspread
To the sun pouring down, and the dew,

Stretching over your head.

That may writher you, and bend, but

While your roots the more sturdily

"There is a solution to the problem of war, but without prayer there is no hope of solution."

Checks, Taken In Robbery, Found

Virgil Parnell, Furloughed Arkansas Convict, Held in Chicago

PINE BLUFF—Virgil Parnell, Pine Bluff, is in custody of Chicago officials who, in a message to Chief W. D. Fiveash here, said that Parnell had made a confession in connection with the possession of approximately $2,300 worth of National City bank (New York) travelers checks stolen from the Peoples bank here in April 1929. Parnell had the checks when arrested, Chicago officials said. Parnell has confessed to receiving the checks from Joe Pollack three weeks after the robbery.

Parnell has been in Chicago about a year, going there immediately after he was given an indefinite furlough by Governor Parnell following his conviction here in connection with the Moore store robbery in June, 1930.

In the Peoples bank robbery four men entered the bank about noon on April 22 1929, and looted it of about $20,000 cash and more than $25,000 worth of traveler's checks. Three men—George Terry, Charlie Young and Bibbie Robbins—later were arrested in New Orleans and a part of the party were tried and sentenced to the penitentiary where they are serving 12-year sentences. The fourth member of the trio was not apprehended, and Chief of Police Fiveash said today that Joe Uolack probably was the fourth man in the quartet.

Following the arrest of the three bandits, Parnell on docters were questioned with reference to having aided the bandits in their escape, and at that time Parnell was believed to have been connected with the getaway. However no definite charges ever were filed against him. In connection with the bank robbery, Ralph H. Reed, former city attorney, was convicted as an accessory and was given a five-year sentence. He was paroled a few months ago.

HOPE HERE TODAY
High old Mrs. JUPITER is robbed and murdered during an engagement party who is giving for her secretary, MARY HARK-
NELL. Mary's suspense brother, BOWEN, is supposed to have been in the house at the murder hour. But, in the meantime, the blue-headed young lawyer, Mary's fiancé, advises her to keep silent about having arranged to meet Eddie McGraw, until he can locate the boy. Eddie has disappeared.
Mary prevents a maid, BESSIE, from telling BOWEN, police reporter for the Star, about Eddie's supposed visit. Dirk telephones that he has found Eddie and will take her to see him that afternoon. Dirk overhears and Bowen drives Mary to the residence. Eddie is run down by a car as he struggles the street to meet Mary. Believing to be the hospital, he mumbles about a fly.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX
EDDIE did not recover consciousness sufficiently to tell his version of the story before he died. There were hours of suspense, for he was young and dying did not come easy to him, even with a fractured skull.

Bowen drew Dirk aside out of Mary's hearing and let his wrath explode.

"I tell you I saw it! It was murder—pure murder! Two feet further over, and they'd have got me, too. By God, to get that guy I'd turn this town upside down!"

"Get away!"
"Clean. I tell you it was all carefully calculated to the minute. Whoever it was took a big chance, swinging around under those pillars. Just as he turned the corner he flooded the carburetor and the number-plate was hidden by smoke."

"But why should anyone want to kill the boy?"

Bowen shrugged. "I've got an idea he knows something about this Jupiter killing."

Rutherford looked at him sharply. "Ah, the kid didn't do it, I don't mean that," the reporter answered. "I'll bet my hat this was a professional job. Somebody did the Jupiter job and hung it on Eddie. And when he went to tell, they got him. That's how I figure it."

Dirk turned away, savage with regret. If he'd been punctual, Eddie might have been living yet. He was convinced the thing was an accident. Newspapersmen lived with sensation until they saw it where it did not exist. If he had been disposed to think that someone had wished Eddie's death, the antagonism he felt for the other man made him veer to the opposite view.

HE could not have explained the stiffness that came into his manner when talking to the newspapermen. It was strongly rooted and came from two causes. An aversion to publicity was bred in the conservative bones of the Rutherford clan. And there was something more, something about the way the absurd fellow's gaze followed Mary that stirred all that was proprietary in Dirk's love.

Bowen pursued his questioning, too absorbed in speculation to notice the other's stiffness. Already a plan was forming in his mind, and if he found enough confirmation of his suspicions, well—he might be on the trail of a bigger story than he had thought.

"How did you get in touch with Harkness, by the way—do you mind telling me?" he asked thoughtfully. "I confess he had me thinking him guilty—until I saw this. Too plain to miss."

"Why," said Dirk, hesitating, "he called up this morning. He really said very little. Said he had tried to reach Mary but the line was busy and he couldn't wait. So he called me instead. I said, 'Where are you?" and he said I'll tell you when I see you. Then he told me to bring Mary and meet him at the corner you took her to at 4 o'clock sharp. If I'd been there on time! But—" he gulped down the fact of his mother's responsibility for the tragedy—"but I was—determined."

"How did he seem? Frightened? Hurried? Anything queer about it, I mean?"

"We—ell," Dirk considered, disliking the reversal of roles in which he found himself. He was usually the interrogator himself. On the other hand, he knew that a refractory witness does himself no good, so he answered courteously enough.

"I got the impression he didn't want to be overheard, perhaps. I couldn't say there was anything more than that in his manner. Nothing very damning in that, I should say. Quite natural, under less peculiar circumstances than these. I was just about to ask him for an explanation when he seemed to—become hurried, suddenly. He said 'I can't talk now,' and added what sounded like—the fly's buzzing around,—and hung up. Sound of rather silly. I wonder what he meant?" He broke off suddenly, remembering that he was talking to a reporter. "Some kid stuff, probably. Very likely meant nothing at all."

Bowen masked the interest this information had for him. "Oh, very likely. Funny, though—he's been talking about a fly in there." He nodded toward the door of the hospital room.

The door of the boy's room opened a crack, and a nurse beckoned. "Mr. Rutherford? Please!" Dirk pushed hurriedly inside, where there was the sound of hushed sobbing. The nurse closed the door, shutting herself and Bowen out. "He's gone," she said. Bowen said, "Where's the nearest 'phone?" and bolted.

IN the weeks that followed Eddie's death the one thing happened that Mary had never dreamed could happen. That was that nothing happened at all. The days went by as usual and there was no news of the sort she wanted to hear.

The private investigators hired by Mr. Jupiter to study his wife's murder—they were the two men who had been hired to protect her and had failed so dismally—were joined by two of their confreres. But the search led nowhere. There were numerous Lorimers in town, even a few aluminum-fitted "special jobs," but they were all in the possession of well-to-do citizens with the most unassailable reputations. The car that had dealt the death blow had vanished off the face of the earth. Probably, they reckoned, locked in a private garage somewhere, where it would remain until the affair should have been forgotten, whence it would emerge repainted. And, unless there was a tip-off, might go undetected altogether. If it had been a "hot" car (that is, stolen), it would have been found deserted. The fact that it was privately owned added to the strength of the rapidly growing theory—now that the first flush of indignation had passed—that Eddie's death was an accident, and not, as George Bowen of the Star, alone among the metropolitan news-writers, insisted, caused by a "murder car."

At last even Bowen bowed to the strength of opposite opinion, apparently, for he stopped chiding the police department for its ineptitude, and even stopped writing any more about the case. None was happier at his sudden silence than Inspector James Kane.

MARY had fed her starving hopes on his persistently optimistic stories. When they stopped, she felt alone as the champion of a lost cause. Mr. Jupiter was preoccupied, living withdrawn from all contacts except his daily consultation with the private detectives.

Dirk was kindness itself; there was something so gently protective, almost paternal, in his attitude toward her nowadays that she was deeply touched by every new manifestation of his tenderness. But he was trying a case in court and had no time to give to a personal investigation. He was loath to talk about the subject, even. His whole intention during their brief hours together seemed to be to draw her mind away from past grief. He wanted to abandon their plans for a formal wedding, and be married at once.

But Mary shook her head. "Wait," she counseled. "You don't want a weeping bride. And I can't forget—Eddie—just yet."

He had to be content. He was no more successful in inducing her to leave what Bowen's somewhat lurid newspaper persisted in calling the "Murder Mansion," and come to stay at his mother's house until the wedding.

"I've promised Dr. Jordan to stay until Bruce Jupiter comes home," she said.

Presently the daily "conferences" with the detectives stopped, and one day there were no stories in any of the papers relating to the Jupiter murder, except one small routine item, headed "Jupiter Murder Probe Lags, No New Developments Expected," says Kane.

Mary knitted her brows over this. She resolved to go to see the inspector herself, and ask him what it meant.

Up to this time the newspaper stories had given the impression that the murderer was just about to be caught. "Solution of Jupiter Murder Mystery Near," said the headlines, and, "Kane Promises Quick Justice for Killer of Multi-Millionaire's Wife." This sudden change of attitude amazed her.

Kane greeted her as usual. "He was walking up and down, looking out the window, now and then pausing to look at her expectantly. That air of his puzzled her; it had from the beginning. He sat down opposite with an air of "Well, what have you to tell me?"

She showed him the newspaper article.

"Oh, sure," he said. "We never had a chance from the beginning. Nothing much we can do but wait."

"But you kept telling the newspapers that you were about to find the murderer!" she reproached him. Disappointment made her bold. "Why did you say that, if you didn't think so?"

Kane struck the newspaper contemptuously with the back of his hand.

"Oh, you've got to give 'em something to chew on," he said. "Far as I'm concerned, the case is closed. We don't know the whole story, but we know—enough."

Pershing Welcomes Petain to U.S.

It was a meeting of distinguished comrades at arms when General John J. Pershing, leader of the American forces in the World War, welcomed Marshal Henri Petain (left), hero of Verdun, to American soil at Old Point Comfort, Va. General Pershing is shown here warmly greeting the famous French commander as the latter came ashore from the French cruiser which brought him to this country to attend the Yorktown sesquicentennial celebration.

Hooks and Slides

WILLIAM BRANCHER

Cousins
 Perhaps no one has thought of this in this respect, but it strikes me that Indiana and Army football teams have been more than generous in supplying Notre Dame with "hooks" in the South Bend campaign. The Irish two-pointed to the 20 games in 1919, 1920 and 1921, and the string of victories that carried them into the next campaign.

Indiana allowed the Irish two-pointed to five with the trip to the 29-30-31. Army dropped again of games to the South Bend in the Gipp era and kicked in 1922, two more in the Carideo regime. This makes nine out of 40 victories that Notre Dame won from the Hoosiers and the Cadets. If it were baseball, you'd call Indiana and Army "cousins" of the Irish for being so good to them.

No Restrictions
 In each long reign of grid supremacy, Notre Dame won from seven dozen colleges. The first string included a number of victories over minor schools. None but minor opponents got into the latter string. This may be taken as proof that the Irish knew they were tough and wanted nothing but foes worthy of their steel.

At any rate, Notre Dame won three games from Kalamazoo in the three of 10 years ago. Indiana's three losses in '29-'30-'31 matches that, although the Hoosiers probably were stronger than Kalamazoo.

Notre Dame won two games each from Michigan State, Nebraska, Indiana, Western Normal, Army and Purdue in the days of Gipp. Carideo guided the Irish to a pair of wins over Navy, Carnegie Tech, Drake, Southern California, Northwestern and Army. There seems to be quite a difference in the quality of those two groups.

Five in Singles Class
 The remaining schools that filled out the earlier string were Valparaiso, Northwestern, DePaul, Mt. Union and Morningside. They were Southern Methodist, Penn, Pitt,

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

CATTISH SMITH and Jack (The Ripper) Roberts are still in the football business down Georgia way. . . . And the same two red-headed guards are holding out at the old stand . . . and the backfield is identically the same as it was last year . . . now you know why the Georgia Bulldogs are touted to run away with the Dixie pennant. . . . Nine collegiate stars who returned recently from the first track and field invasion of South Africa report that some of the "dark continent" athletes will be heard from in the Olympics next year. . . . They advise us to keep an eye on Hart, a shot putter; J. Bert, a sprinter, and Smit, a quarter-mile. . . . Hart was only in the 47-foot class when he started competition with Barney Berlinger, Penn star. . . . By the time Berlinger left the country Hart had done 51 feet 7 inches, within a foot of the world record.

Wisconsin and Georgia Tech in the latter one.

There is a difference, too, in the scoring during the two reigns. In the first one Notre Dame ran up a total of 593 points, an average per game of slightly less than 30 points, to 104 by their opponents. This figures at a fraction over five points a game. The modern winning streak netted the Irish a total of 435 points in 20 games, something under 22 points per contest. The opposition totaled 112, which is almost six points a game.

From these statistics you'd naturally assume that the Irish encountered stronger opponents in the latter string of triumphs. That may be the correct assumption. But add to that the fact that Kalamazoo never got the idea of starting "hook troops" and using them extensively until the Four Horsemen started to ride.

New Football Field In Fine Condition

Game Friday Night Expected to Be Among Best of Season

The football game between the Benton Panthers and the Hope Bobcats will be played Friday evening in spite of the fall of rain which fell early Friday morning. The rainfall, instead of damaging the new field has proved beneficial, according to reports received at noon and could stand even more rain before hurting the game.

The game will be called at 8 o'clock sharp and advance ticket sales points to a record crowd. Tickets may be obtained from Webb's News Stand or Moreland's Drug Store, or at the High School.

This game will probably be the best to be seen on the local field this season and the local team is confident of winning.

The starting lineup is as follows:

| HOPE | BENTON |
| Pritchett (C) | Fleming |
| Warmack | Left End |
| Jacks | Center |
| Sissell | Right Tackle |
| Brown | Right End |
| Bacon | Quarterback |
| Rowe | Halfback |
| Hargis | Fullback |

Officials for the game will be Hartung, Texas A. M.; Dalrymple, Henderson; Remp, Hendrix; White, Arkansas College.

Game called at 8 o'clock.

Long, slender hands are truly an aristocratic feature so far as this Austrian beauty is concerned. This recent photo shows her in a striking pose.

Three Dead After Negro Runs Amuck

Slays Officer, Causing Sister's Death in Wreck, Then Kills Self

DURHAM, N. C.—(P)—Everett McLean, 28, negro, ran amuck in an automobile here Wednesday, shot and killed B. H. Beasley, Southern Pines police chief, caused the accidental death of his sister, Georgia McLean, wounded his wife, Pearl McLean, and after being arrested, committed suicide by hanging himself in the Durham county jail.

Officers pieced together the story from accounts given by McLean, his wife and Junius Austin, another negro occupant of the car who was held as a material witness.

Beasley, 40, a Virginian, was shot twice from behind without warning. The automobile, which was driven by the officer, careened from the road and was demolished when it struck a stump, killing Georgia McLean. McLean then shot his wife through the shoulder and fled with Austin and the McLean baby, which was unhurt in the wreck.

The negro was arrested in Tarboro. Officers said he denied knowledge of any shooting, and contended that there had been only an automobile accident. They said Chief Beasley had accompanied McLean to Boydton, Va., on an errand of friendship, seeking to have charges of attempted murder against the negro dismissed. In this they failed.

It was on the return trip to Southern Pines that Beasley was killed, and the automobile wrecked.
